Titolo progetto	Filiere agroalimentari sostenibili e comunità locali/Genuinagente2

Forum Cooperazione e Tecnologia is an Italian non-profit association that realizes and manages projects to promote and build environmentally and socially sustainable communities, an activity with which we have almost 20 years of experience. We carry out research and experimentations, offer consultancy to local Municipalities and organize courses and seminars for citizens and local farmers. Our projects are innovative and strongly embedded in the local territory.

With our project Genuinagente2 we want to support alternative and sustainable food network in local communities. We focus on the connection between the city of Milan and the Agricultural Park of 47.000 hectares that embraces it, the Parco Agricolo Sud Milano. Our main aim is to create a shared strategy between sustainable producers and consumers networks in order to give continuity to the governance models of these networks. In particular, we want:

- to enhance and give continuity to the short food supply chains that exist within the Park
- to connect the most important initiatives related to the creation of sustainable communities
- to give consistency to the definition of governance models for these networks of initiatives and short food supply chains, through the formulation of public food policy.

We link public policy and citizen initiatives with each other, by identifying shared strategies and tools in collaboration with the different Actors involved in the project, such as local farmers, consumer groups, Municipalities and associations.
